‘Uniform of debris’ is a collaborative art installation investigating lost and discarded plastics. The work uses the ritual and formality of a dinner party. A table is laid with plastic cutlery and plates constructed to resemble a coral reef. Voices of dinner guests discuss the environmental impact of plastic pollution, and coral loss. Kathryn and Roy Nelson have collaborated to create ‘Uniform of debris’. Kathryn is a conceptual artist. Roy has a background in communication and social science research.

PlasticSmart is a Causeway Coast and Glens Borough Council campaign to encourage reduction of single-use plastics with residents, visitors, schools, community groups, churches and businesses.

Read school children’s thoughts on plastic pollution through our PlasticSmart poetry competition. Network with others encouraging reduction of single use plastics and litter.
